Liberty Chapel

Joseph Garrett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Garrett, is confined to his bed with "flu."

Mr. and Mrs. M. L Garrett had as dinner guests Sunday, Mr. W. W. Woodson, Miss Celene Woodson and Mr. Harvey, all of Spring Mills.

Rev. L. R. Thornhill will preach Sunday Jan. 16, at 11:30 a. m. at Liberty Chapel Baptist Church. A large crowd is desired.

Piney Mountain

The young people of Piney Mountain gave Mr. Teray Totty a surprise party Saturday night Jan. 8th. Every one had a good time.

Mr. Raymond Lucado has gone to Richmond to work.

Mr. W. H. S. Barlow has returned to his work in Freeburn, Ky., after spending a few days with his family here.

We miss the Nowlin boys these cold winter days. They were very frequent visitors, and their company was always enjoyed.

Mr. Jim Childers seems to be very interested in Oakville high school. Keep it up Jim, you never get too old to learn.

Mr. Bill Connor has certainly helped our roads over here, by scraping them. We are glad to learn that "Big Bad Bill" is "Sweet William," now.

ROCKS NEWS

Christmas over! The New Year is here!

We are sorry to note the illness of Mr. Robert Cawthorn, of near "Hollywood."

Mr. Cleveland Paulett, wife and family, visited Mrs. Paulette's relatives in Lynchburg Christmas day. Mr. Calhoun, her father, was not so well at the time. We hope he is O. K. now.

Mr. Martin Johnson, of Lynchburg, visited relatives in our neighborhood during Xmas.

Mr. Hubert Martin, of Lynchburg, was guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Ranson, and family, last week.

Schools are in full swing since Xmas.

Miss Lelia Harvey, who has been visiting her aunt, Miss Patty Almond, during Christmas has returned to her home in Marfrance, W. Va.

SCIENCE IS USED TO BARE CRIME

Novel Apparatus Registers Guilty Excitement.

New York.—Using specially devised apparatus to measure the electrical resistance of the human skin and an electrical stethoscope which enabled the audience to hear the thumping of the heart of the person under examination, Dr. A. P. Link, instructor in psychology at New York university, demonstrated to the New York Electrical society how science can aid in detecting and apprehending criminals.

Three persons selected from the audience were sent out of the room under sealed instructions. One of the trio chosen by lot went to a room on the tenth floor of the building where a letter was taken out of an overcoat pocket.

From the envelope $10 was removed, the letter was replaced and the "culprit," whose identity was not disclosed to Doctor Link or those in the audience, returned to the auditorium.

Doctor Link then subjected each of the three to electrical psychology tests. The emotions aroused by the guilt of the "robber" became instantly evident on the records of the apparatus.

An electrical stethoscope, specially devised by the Bell Telephone laboratories, amplifying the heart-beat sounds more than 100,000 times, enabled the audience to hear the thumping of the heart. When the young man who had opened the envelope and removed the $10 was asked questions bearing on the "robbery" his quickened thumping of heart when the key words were mentioned was instantly made evident.

In addition to the quickened heart beat of the one who removed the $10 from the envelope, "guilty excitement" was also demonstrated in the form of a moving spot of light thrown on a screen in full view of the audience. The spot shot clear across the screen when the person questioned became unduly excited.

Doctor Link explained that excitement lowered the electrical resistance of the skin. This, he said, was especially when an effort was made to lie or to conceal the truth.

According to Doctor Link this reaction is entirely outside the control of the person examined. He said this apparatus was "a complete give-away of the emotions which the robber was attempting to conceal." Doctor Link also explained a number of psychological tests, electrical and otherwise, now in use for the selection of employees, either for hire or promotion. He said these tests must not be used as infallible guides, but as an aid to the general common sense.

Ample Coal in Colombia for World 500 Years

Chicago.—When American coal supplies are exhausted, the world may look to the republic of Colombia for fuel, Dr. Alberto Benavides, consul of Colombia, said here, in planning for the welcome in Colombia to be extended the Illinois manufacturers and merchants who visit his country in February.

"Colombia," Doctor Benavides said, "has enough coal to furnish the world its supply for the next five centuries."

Leaving Chicago, February 1, a group of 78 Illinois manufacturers and merchants will take a Caribbean sea cruise for trade promotion purposes, touching two ports in the republic of Colombia—Barranquilla and Puerto Colombia.

"This treasure land of promise," Doctor Benavides said, "is nearer to the United States than any other South American country.

"Gold is found in almost a free state in every river of the republic. Every mineral known to mankind is found in Colombia in abundance. There is one port where the platinum of the world is produced."

Worth It

New York.—John M. Reiss, a nephew, has been awarded a fortune that requires three hours to count. It consists of $4,481.80 in pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters, found in the room of Mrs. Tillie Reiss.

Section Hand Heads $2,000,000 Business

Marysville, Kans.—From railroad section employee to control of a $2,000,000 manufacturing corporation in a few days has been the accomplishment of James W. Reynolds of this city.

Reynolds obtained a layoff last month from his job with the Union Pacific railroad here, and a few days ago a corporation to manufacture a railway spike of which he and two associates have control was organized in Chicago. The concern is the Superior Spike company.

About the time of the World war Reynolds invented a bottleless rail joint. He was without capital to market his invention. One day on the right of way he found a paper which contained the name of C. E. Ennis, Hincon, N. M., roadmaster for the Santa Fe railroad, who at that time was president of a switch manufacturing company with headquarters at Kansas City.

They became acquainted and a partnership was formed to introduce the boltless rail joint.

WILD WOMAN FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH

Roamed Michigan Woods for Fifty Years.

Calumet, Mich.—Old Maggie Harrington, forest wanderer, was found frozen to death, eight miles from her dilapidated old cabin near the old Central mine in Copper country, northern Michigan, recently.

She was seventy years old. For the last fifty years Maggie has roamed the forests, fearless of man or beast, at all times of the day or night, as wild as the gray wolf and as harmless as the deer.

Subsisting upon raw and uncooked foods and wild berries, with clothing enough only to decently cover her—no stockings, mittens and no hat, she wandered many miles through the dense forests from one camp to the other and often crouched in the corner of a deserted cabin for the night, away from the howling wolves and sheltered from the bitter north winds when the weather was far below zero. At daybreak she would walk another ten or fifteen miles back to her own stoveless shack, or go on many miles in another direction to some miner's cabin for a cupful of coffee.

Wild Woman's Home.

Her old tumbled-down cabin at Central mine, with windows stuffed with old papers or potato bags, its pile of ashes in the middle of the floor, where the old rusty stove had long since fallen apart, the chairs and kitchen table decayed where they stood, and in the corner of the bare room a pile of dirty rags which served her as sleeping quarters for these many years.

She was often seen by tourists as they drove along the northern highway, but she managed to get into the forest before they reached her.

Maggie had one ride in an auto and that was four years ago when she had an infected foot. That ride took her twenty-five miles to Calumet for treatment.

She was intelligent and had a common school education, and her mother was noted among the old neighbors as a splendid housekeeper, clean and orderly.

Retained Keen Mind.

Maggie had degenerated in the matter of clothing and way of living only; her mind was keen, and what stories she could tell of the wild things she knew so well.

Whatever transpired in the life of this strange woman to change her from a shy, sheltered, golden-haired, beautiful girl as she was fifty years ago at the time her mother died, into a silent hermit of the great forests, no one can say. She kept her own council—shared confidences with none and died with her secret on her frozen lips.

Old Maggie was buried at Eagle Harbor near the spot where she stood over the little grave fifty years ago and cursed the fate that had robbed her of the mother she idolized, and changed her into a wild woman of the great Michigan forests at one stroke.

"Trench Mouth" Attacks Thousands at Trenton

Trenton, N. J.—An epidemic of "trench mouth," a gum infection technically called Vincent's disease, has spread through Trenton in the last few days. The malady, which is traceable to the World war and transmitted from person to person, has effected several thousands, Trenton dentists declare.

Nearby places also are troubled. At the Skillman epileptic village, a state institution, the malady has been so general that physicians were called to launch a fight against it.

"Stop kissing" is the word passed out by the health department in an effort to combat the malady.

The doctors declared the disease was rare in the United States before the war. They say it was brought back by the American Expeditionary forces.

Priest Plans to Restore California Mission

San Juan Capistrano, Calif.—Seventy-one years after President Lincoln signed the land office patent, restoring the lands and building of Mission San Juan Capistrano to the Catholic church for "religious and educational purposes," the ruins of the "jewel of the Franciscan chain" are to be made to conform to the purposes for which the patent was signed.

Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, the Kentucky padre, who came to the mission to die in 1911, but who became so imbued in the restoration of the ruins that he regained robust health, announced that work had started on a construction program which will convert the crumbled adobe of the north wing into quarters for a convent and religious school.

It Worked

San Antonio, Texas. — The latest wrinkle in jury service evasion worked like a charm in a case here. "What's your profession?" one of the attorneys asked a talesman. "I'm a bootlegger." "Dismissed," ruled the judge.

Heiress Goes to Work

Philadelphia. — Miss Elinor Dorrance, eighteen-year-old heiress, is punching the time clock at 8:30 a. m. for her father's company, which makes soups. Tired of social life, she wants a business career.
